Born to Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Hurl on Tuesday, August 4, a son.
On Tuesday morning while killing chickens, David Prior received a very bad gash in his elbow. His cousin, Ron Prior, rushed him to the Mannville hospital. We are glad to say no bones were broken, but it is expected that he will have to remain in hospital for at least a week.

That makes three of our Sea Cadets—David Prior, Lorne Coulman and Gary Archibald—who will be unable to fly to Vancouver Island on Friday. It must be a big disappointment to these lads, but at least they can sympathize with each other.

Last Wednesday a number of ladies enjoyed a very pleasant afternoon at the Stanley Tea given by Mrs. Robin Johnson.

Mrs. Piper and family of Jasper, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin and family of Marlbor, Mr. and Mrs. C. Shippy of Edson have been recent visitors to the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Lyn Hunter and Mr. and Mrs. V. Shippy.

The two little daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Art Ziegler of Vegreville are enjoying a week's holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Phil Holt and family.

Mrs. Edna Smith and Miss Frances Barrs of Calgary spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Love of Toronto, Dr. and Mrs. G. Ashton of Guelph, Ont., and Mr. and Mrs. Allen Cox, Pat and Lynne were Monday visitors at the Currie home.

The Irma WMS will conduct the morning service at Albert on Sunday, August 16. Mrs. Theroux will be in charge.

There will be a full account next week of the shower held on Wednesday at Albert in honor of Miss Colleen Archibald.

Darlene Hockett spent few days at the home of Beverly Prior last week.

Most tax increases in Canada in the last 10 years have been engendered by (1) defence costs or (2) increasing social security schemes.

Weekly Inspirational Corner

(Sponsored by an Irma Times reader)

O Lord our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth! who hast set thy glory above the heavens.

Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings hast thou ordained strength because of thine enemies, that thou mightest still the enemy and the avenger.

When I consider thy heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast ordained;

What is man, that thou art mindful of him? And the son of man, that thou visitest him?

For thou hast made him a little lower than the angels, and hast crowned him with glory and honour.

Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet;

All sheep and oxen, yea, and the beasts of the field;

The fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and whatsoever passeth through the paths of the seas.

O Lord our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth! —Psalm 8.

Poultry Care
The most profitable pullets are the ones which start to produce early in the fall and then keep producing over winter. Don't switch your pullets from developing to laying mash until they have started to lay or they may lay for a short time and then quit. Adequate room is important for good production. Some of the space requirements are listed as follows: Roosts—7 to 8 inches per bird; Floor Space—3½ to 4 square feet per bird; Feed Hoppers—3 inches per bird; Waterers—one 8 gallon waterer per 100 birds; Nests—one for each five birds.

The flock should be culled regularly to get rid of off type and non-producing birds. If your birds are laying well and losing weight it indicates that they need more feed; try more scratch grain.

Harvesting Barley

Some of our barley which should be eligible for a malting grade is degraded because it is peeled and broken. This can usually be avoided by reducing the cylinder speed and having the concaves properly adjusted. In other cases barley is threshed tough because it will thresh when wheat will not. If you use all your barley for feed this is not important but if you plan or hope to sell some of it, make sure that you wind up with the best possible sample. With more care at harvesting time, Canadian barley would be more popular on the overseas market.

What About Cattle?

Poor pastures and the possibility of shortage of good feed indicate that it might be a good time to look over the cow herd. Prices are reasonable now and if the herd should be reduced the best way to do it is to cull out the poorer cows. Most herds have some animals which are not producing top calves; these are the ones which should be taken first.

BUSY BEAVERS

On Thursday, July 30, the Busy Beavers W.I. Girls met at the Albert School for their annual meeting and to hear the reports of A. Keller, Janet Prior and Laverne Larson and their leader, Mrs. Jones on their trip to Olds and to show what articles they had made.

There were nine members present, their mothers and members of the W.I.

After a discussion we decided to hold two meetings a month at Albert School—one on the first Monday and fourth Thursday of each month. This is the list of the prize-winners at Olds:

Senior Group: Sleeveless Blouse; 2nd prize, Laverne Larson; TV mat of drawn fabric embroidery; 2nd prize, Enid Jones; Cook book; 1st prize, Laverne Larson.

Intermediate Group: Half slip; 2nd prize, Janet Prior; Place mat of drawn fabric embroidery; 2nd prize, Janet Prior; Cook book; 2nd prize, Barbara Hardy.

After a couple of contests, which were won by Mrs. Knight and Yvonne Blanchard, lunch was served.

We would like to thank our mothers and the W.I. ladies for coming.

CHEST X-RAY DATES ANNOUNCED

Irma — August 25; commence operations at 2 p.m.

All those who have received cards should note the time and dates for this X-Ray survey.

Greatest challenge facing Canadian labor and management during 1959 is the keeping of costs to a point where they don't price Canadian-made articles out of the competitive export market.

EASTERLY ECHOES

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Taylor, Sherale, Marjorie, Harvey and Larry Funk motored to Swift Current, Sask. on Thursday to attend their cousin's wedding. Marvin Taylor visited with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Taylor, in his parents' absence.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Hall and family returned to Taber on Saturday.

Mrs. Art Long and Mrs. M. Creasy are patients in the Wainwright hospital.

Donald and David Foulkes are visiting with their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Lockhart.

Monday evening we received a very welcome rain. There was also considerable lightning. While Mr. and Mrs. Ted Hill visited with Mrs. Wes Bacon about 8 p.m., they were astonished to see a flame following the power line directly south of Wes' house. The electric clock was put out of commission. Mrs. Eddie Jackson also reported lightning coming through the house during the afternoon storm. Fortunately no serious damage was caused in either case.

Wedding Bells

LARSON — STEWART

A quiet wedding took place in Irma United Church on July 29th at 2:30 p.m. when Janet Claudia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Stewart of Edgerton, became the bride of Charles Lawrence, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Larson of Irma.

Rev. H. W. Inglis officiated at the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a grey suit with white accessories and a corsage of pink and white carnations.

Following the wedding ceremony a reception for a few intimate friends was held at the home of the groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Larson left for a honeymoon trip to Cranbrook, B.C. They will make their home in Wainwright.

Woman's Way

MADELINE LEVASON

"BATTLE OF THE SEXES"

Women in public office are frequently urging other women to join their ranks. They claim the only reason more Canadian women are not elected to office is that the women are afraid to try.

Mayor Elizabeth Wood of New Westminster is the latest to speak out on the subject. "Men would forget the battle of the sexes, if women forgot it first," she said.

She deplored the fact that although it is 35 years since the first woman was elected to Canada's parliament, only nine have since reached Parliament Hill. She pointed out that women form one-half the voting strength of Canada but there are still only three women members of the House of Commons and five women Senators.

If lack of ambition for public office is the only barrier confronting Canadian women, then things have changed a great deal since that first woman was elected to parliament.

The recently published biography of Agnes Macphail reveals how deeply shocked and hurt she was by the bitter hostility of her male colleagues. Although her intimates knew her as an extremely warm and friendly woman, she acquired the reputation of a cantankerous spinster, as she lashed out at her tormentors.

In her own words: "I was miserably unhappy. Some members resented my intrusion, others jeered at me, while a very few were genuinely glad to see a woman in the House. . . . If you are picking a candidate," she wrote friends, "pick a strong one who is able to stand up against that wall of steel."

Agnes Macphail was able to "stand up" and continued to do so for 18 years, winning a number of social reforms as well as the respect of many of her former detractors.

Strangely enough, in later years, she too rallied against women for their inertia and timidity in seeking office. No doubt she and those who have followed in her footsteps have made great progress towards peaceful co-existence with the males.

Perhaps the main reason they urge other women to enter the political ring is a deeper one. They must have found real personal satisfaction in service to their fellow Canadians.

FIRST ROYAL TOUR

The first formal royal tour of Canada was in 1860 when the then Prince of Wales, who became Edward the 7th, visited here.

URANIUM CITY as it is today. This aerial view shows the main business section at rear-centre, background and the residential section, fanning out around it and extending to the foreground. The area's main transportation artery, Uranium Road, extending from the port of Bushell, on Lake Athabasca, through Unani.

Modern Uranium City on Royal Tour agenda

When Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip visited this uranium mining centre (July 20th), they saw a picturesque, model town, prospering in the heart of a rugged, north country wilderness.

In the words of J. M. "Jock" McMeekin, Uranium City's erstwhile, weekly newspaper editor: "This is an orderly, well laid out town, here to stay."

It is, in fact, more modern than many a southern "outside" town of similar size—population 2,500, with another 2,500 in the immediate vicinity. It boasts sewer and water, power, public and high schools, department stores, service clubs, an automatic, dial telephone system, a spanking new hospital and other refinements of a progressive, modern, urban community.

Uranium City is the supply and service centre of northern Saskatchewan's fabulously rich Beaverlodge uranium field, which, today, yields $5,000,000 worth of uranium monthly and in the early 1950's spawned the most spectacular mining rush of the 20th century.

It was North America's first major uranium rush and occurred in August, 1952. It attracted prospectors and adventure seekers from everywhere and caught the imagination of people around the world.

A Polish count and countless were among the uranium seekers.

A flat broke, but optimistic Irishman, Patrick Hughes, started on the road to fame and fortune with some claims staked during the rush.

The great uranium boom carried on through 1952 and 1953. Companies were being formed almost every day and practically everybody was investing in uranium stocks. This was one of those grand, slam-bang, but woefully brief periods in the history of the mining game when everyone was making money—on paper, at least.

Many names are associated with the short but lively history of Uranium City. Thanks to a vigilant Mounted Police detachment, the lawlessness that has characterized the early development of most mining camps was absent here, so the names are mostly those belonging to law-abiding, successful citizens—men like Mayor J. Paul Vincent.

A big, powerfully built man, Paul Vincent developed his bulging muscles and stalwart frame juggling around heavy oil and gas drums. An oil company dealer, he found it tough sledding during his first years here, as did most of the pioneering businessmen, who had heavy initial capital investments to make in buildings and equipment. But his business grew with the town and he is a wealthy man today.

Then there's the incomparable Gus Hawker, a tall beanpole of a man, who was Uranium City's first storekeeper. Gus used his big hands from the store business to invest in uranium claims, which he turned over at a tidy profit.

"Strike some claims and make your fortune," was the way Gus greeted the strangers swarming into the budding uranium mining centre. In his curiously swarming business way, he capitalized on the publicity he got during the 1952 rush. One of his promotional gimmicks was to order several hundred sweat shirts made, with the words, "The Famous Gus Hawker Store" emblazoned across the front of each. They sold like hot cakes.

He used a shoebox as a cash register and in another box beside it, kept a loaded .45 calibre revolver, which, he swore, was the best kind of insurance a man could have in the north country. Gus Hawker is still in the store business in Uranium City. He is becoming one of the town's grand old men—rich, mellowing with the years, and full of memories.

Is Lake Agassiz in Canada

—THE PLAINEDEALER, Souris, Man.

Not any more. It is the name given to one of the great glacial lakes of Canada. At its maximum extent it occupied parts of Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario, Minnesota and North Dakota, covering about 110,000 square miles, an area larger than that now occupied by the Great Lakes. It drained to the southeast into the Mississippi River system. When the ice sheets melted sufficiently to allow a channel to the northeast, Lake Agassiz was drained into Hudson Bay, leaving as its successors Lake Winnipeg and other bodies of water in Manitoba and the Lake of the Woods and other lakes in northwestern Ontario.

FIRE STATISTICS

Of 25,606 fires in Ontario in 1953, 9,978 were caused by smokers' carelessness; fires caused by electricity resulted in the biggest fire loss, $2.2 million; lightning caused 1,035 fires; spontaneous combustion 175; gas fired appliances caused only 151.

'Bugs, plants,' ancient oceans gave Canada oil and gas

CARL O. NICKLE, publisher of the 'Daily Oil Bulletin', Calgary, Alberta

Mea, methods, tools and capital of today deserve the credit for finding and developing oil and gas in Western Canada, but credit for the existence of these resources belongs to 'bugs and plants' of bygone ages, up to several hundred million years ago. In ancient oceans hosts of tiny sea creatures and plant life lived and died, became buried in mud, sand and silt, ever deeper as the earth shifted, folded and changed to the form we know today. Under tremendous heat and pressure the mud and silt turned to shale, the sands to porous rock, and the buried animal and plant life was distilled into oil and gas. Together with vast quantities of trapped sea waters, the oil and gas gradually worked upwards until trapped under layers of non-porous rock, still deep underground. Today's oil seekers hunt for these traps, wherever ancient oceans once existed and 'sedimentary basins' were formed.

Western Canada has such a sedimentary basin, covering some 600,000 square miles, reaching from the Rocky Mountains on the west to the Precambrian Shield on the east, from the U.S. border to the Arctic shores. It covers most of Alberta, northeast British Columbia, southern Saskatchewan, southwest Manitoba, a wide slice of the Yukon and Northwest Territories. Other sedimentary basins exist in the Canadian Arctic Islands, along the Pacific Coast, around Hudson's Bay, in the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence region, and in the Maritime Provinces. But these haven't yet paid off like the sedimentary basin underlying the grain fields, ranch lands and muskegs of the West, although southwest Ontario and New Brunswick have developed some oil and gas.

How rich is the Western Canadian Basin? What kind of future can it yield for our nation? To the recent Borden Royal Commission on Energy were presented the careful opinions of oil industry experts, based on the growing fund of knowledge on Canada's sedimentary areas. The conclusions: ultimate 'virgin reserves' of Western Canada include over 300,000 Billion cubic feet of natural gas, over 48 Billion barrels of crude oil, over six Billion barrels of Gas Liquids, and some 200 Billion barrels of bitumen in Alberta's Athabasca Tar Sands. The combination, concludes one major oil company, is 'only five percent of the generative capacity of the Western Canadian Basin', and thus provides a 'feeling of confidence that our reserve estimates are well within the right order of magnitude'.

Despite recent years' growth, we have so far found and utilized a small fraction of our resources. Proved reserves of crude oil and other liquid petroleum which were under 100 Million barrels at beginning of 1947—climbed to 3.6 Billion barrels by end of 1953, despite production of about One Billion barrels in the 12 years. Last year, for each barrel produced, over three barrels of new reserves were discovered.

Proved reserves of natural gas—which were about 1,500 Billion cubic feet at beginning of 1947—climbed to over 25,000 Billion cubic feet by end of 1953, despite production of nearly 2,000 Billion feet in the 12 years. Last year, despite record production of 400 Billion cubic feet, almost 10 cubic feet of reserves were discovered for each one cubic foot consumed.

DAILY IRON PRODUCTION
The daily iron production of a blast furnace was increased from 633 tons to 1,075 tons by replacing natural iron ore with sinter, a combination of iron with other minerals, at the Steel Company of Canada's plant at Hamilton, Ontario.

CARE IN HARVESTING MALTING BARLEY

Mechanical damage to barley, during harvesting, frequently results in pooled kernels which are undesirable for malting purposes.

It will pay, therefore, to take every precaution to see that barley intended for malting is harvested at the right stage, is properly threshed so as to permit complete drying and maturing, and is carefully threshed so as to avoid the pooling or breaking of kernels.
